WELCOME TO THE BEDELL SEED-TO-SONG JOURNEY

Congratulations! You are now the steward of a beautiful Bedell Coffee House guitar. Growing up in Spirit Lake, Iowa in the 1960s, my teen years were full of afternoons and evenings in the local coffee house. Back then they were more like youth hang outs – we all brought our acoustic guitars, played the latest folk songs and shared our own poetry and songwriting. It was a magical time of social awakening... we were keenly interested in exploring and expressing the values of human equality, worldwide peace, and stewardship of our earth. The most coveted guitars of the time were dreadnoughts with a rosewood body and spruce top.

Now, more than 50 years later, with a workshop of my own, one of the first guitars I designed was the Bedell Coffee House. Naturally, a rosewood body was mandatory. I chose East Indian rosewood that grows on coffee plantations in southwestern India – these trees shaded the coffee plants from the brutal Indian summer heat.

A LETTER FROM TOM

I chose this rosewood for its tonal quality and its beauty – but most significantly, for how it is planted, nurtured, and harvested in full harmony with our earth, the economies of the surrounding communities, consistent with all international treaties and regulations protecting our world's forests.

To get the full folk/rock sound from our Coffee House, I selected Adirondack (red) spruce. We partner with John Griffin of Old Standard Wood to individually harvest Adirondack trees at the end of their life cycle in a manner that minimizes the impact the surrounding flora and fauna.

With Bedell Guitars, I am 100% committed to knowing as much as I can about where the trees grew, how they were harvested, the economic impact on the communities, and the chain of custody of the wood from seed to song. As the following pages reveal, we provide all of the verification and paperwork so that you know the details of your guitar, and can rest assured that its woods were thoughtfully harvested. This journal also provides you with the documentation to ensure that as our international laws become more stringent to protect our world's forests, you know your guitar is in full compliance.

When you first strummed your Coffee House, I know you recognized that full, balanced acoustic sound of the 1960s. I'm confident you will get a lifetime of pleasure from this handcrafted guitar – and you can take it with you anywhere in the world. Please never hesitate to give us a call at 888.234.2210, or email us at info@bedellguitars.com if we can assist you in any way.

Peace,

Tom Bedell

*“During the ‘60s, we gathered at coffee houses with our acoustic guitars to play the latest Bob Dylan and Peter, Paul and Mary releases, and share our personal song writing.
It was a time of discovery and promise.”*

INTRODUCTION

FOR THE TIMELESS FOLK-ROCK SOUND that defined an entire generation, look no further than the Bedell Coffee House series. These instruments are exquisitely crafted to revive the spirit that inspired the incredible music of the counterculture era: Adirondack spruce tops from individually harvested trees, sustainably grown Indian rosewood backs and sides, traditional body shapes, an espresso sunburst finish, and the handcrafted koa binding. The workshop-installed K&K Pure Mini pickups capture the fullness of sound and the vibe of the era, authentically, without stage feedback.

The ethically sourced tonewoods, the all-wood binding and subtle appointments result in a classic instrument, made with the same care, attention and craftsmanship as guitars from the golden era of instrument building... all at an accessible price point.

In the late '50s, mainstream American teenagers were crowding around jukeboxes and soda fountains, watching Sandra Dee surf her way to love on the big screen, then going home to watch Ed Sullivan and Perry Mason on giant console TVs with parents who took their cues from Ward and June Cleaver. At the same time, the early rumblings of an underground counterculture movement could be heard around the country. Nowhere was the rumbling louder than in the humble coffee houses that began gaining popularity with forward-thinking young people. The coffee house scene would eventually launch the folk-rock revolution, and with it, a generation of singer songwriters who changed the course of music history.

Coffee houses had been around since the '40s, but it was the beat poet of the '50s who transformed them into something more than places to get a good cup of joe. The beatniks descended on these dark, quirky enclaves to share ideas and poetry, to express their often leftist-liberal leanings and to dissent against the popular Leave-it-to-Beaver paradigm; imagine Allen Ginsberg reading Howl in a smoky haze at The Insomniac coffee house in Hermosa Beach, California. As the '50s drew to a close and "Bonanza," the first color TV series, debuted, coffee houses were becoming a hotbed for young people who had a passion for social justice, diversity and inclusiveness, and not just beatniks, but every-day kids who were experiencing the generation gap and looking for an alternative to the perfectly coifed conformity of their parents' lives.

INTRODUCTION

Coffee houses were the perfect venue for intimate acoustic performances, so it was natural that these budding revolutionaries began to express their values and personal and political opinions through music. Joan Baez, Peter, Paul and Mary, Jim Morrison, and many other marquis artists of the era made their public debuts at coffee houses across the country. By the mid '60s, coffee houses could be found in even the smallest towns – but they were more like teen centers than the Wi-Fi-driven franchise cafes of modern day. Every coffee house had a unique character, often driven by owners who had counterculture leanings themselves, with a comfortable, moody vibe and eclectic junkyard chic décor. The coffee houses of the '60s were havens for kids who longed to express their individuality in a time when conformity was still prized by the older generation. Teens would gather, much like the beats did only a few years prior, to share ideas... and music, to listen to each other perform their own music and the popular folk songs of the moment.

In the coffee house scene, every young performer coveted a rosewood-spruce guitar. Brazilian rosewood guitars were harder to find and were increasingly expensive (Brazil would ban the export of whole logs in the late 60s), and Indian rosewood was swiftly becoming the accessible tonewood of choice. There is something striking about the sound of rosewood paired with Adirondack spruce... when strummed, the Coffee House guitars take you right back to that moment in time when music was changing forever, when coffee houses were a radical, safe place for youth who wanted to change the world, and who believed in equality, justice, love and authentic self-expression. The coffee houses of yesteryear are long gone, but the ideals, the music, and the passion of that era live on in the Bedell Coffee House series.

ADIRONDACK SPRUCE

WOOD	Adirondack spruce, also known as red spruce, originates in eastern North America. It has been the choice of bluegrass pickers for decades and adds power to any guitar design. It is relatively heavy, with a high velocity of sound, and has the highest stiffness of all top woods across and along the grain.
BOTANICAL NAME	Picea rubens
ORIGIN	Eastern North America, ranging from eastern Quebec to Nova Scotia, and from New England south into the Adirondack Mountains and Appalachians to western North Carolina.
TONAL QUALITIES	Has higher resonance and more complex overtones than Sitka, and provides strong volume and pronounced individual note clarity with vintage sound. Responsive whether played softly or loudly, Adirondack is well suited for fingerstyle, flatpicking, or rhythm playing.
AESTHETICS	Straight uniform grain. Coloration ranges from white to pink to light brown.

CONSERVATION OF ADIRONDACK SPRUCE

HOW YOU CAN HELP

Adirondack spruce, picea rubens, is suffering some decline, particularly at higher elevations and forestry experts believe air pollution may be a key factor. Minor declines in lower elevation populations have been detected, possibly due to ozone exposure. Picea rubens is listed as an endangered species by the state of New Jersey, and as a “special concern” species by the state of Connecticut.

The soundboard in your Coffee House guitar is crafted from individual Adirondack spruce trees that were mere saplings when our nation was in its infancy, as our founding fathers were carving out American independence. These trees were carefully hand-harvested, in partnership with John Griffin and Old Standard Wood. John sought out these majestic trees and rescued them at the end of their life cycle, to give them a second life in the form of magnificent musical instruments. If the tree wasn't already on the forest floor but would be soon, John and his crew would have carefully felled the tree, using the directional fall method to limit the disturbance to the surrounding plant and animal life. Then they cut the tree into sections and loaded it onto a small all-terrain tractor called a Forwarder, which was equipped with floatation tires (tires designed to be gentle on saplings and other delicate flora). After the tree was loaded onto an Old Standard Wood truck, it was treated to ward off bugs and decay. Over the next week, the tree was a passenger as John made his way back from the East Coast to Missouri, visiting friends and colleagues along the way. Once the tree arrived at John's shop, it was immediately processed into top sets. The sets were left to air dry for a minimum of six months before making their way to Bend, Oregon and into the hands of the talented luthiers at Bedell Guitars.

ABOUT OLD STANDARD WOOD

Owner John Griffin and his crew scour the forests for precious trees that are in danger of, as John says, “becoming bug food.” Once John acquires the appropriate permits, he carefully removes these hand-selected and hand-felled trees from their habitat and brings them back to his shop in Fulton, Missouri, perched on the bluffs overlooking Cedar Creek, for processing and drying.

John is a conservationist at heart, and accordingly, is committed to the wise use of our natural resources. He believes selectively harvesting dead, fallen or nearly dead trees is essential for the health and longevity of our forests.

“Old Standard Wood specializes in the direct select harvest of Adirondack from deteriorating old-growth stands... this is the spruce that was used in the “golden era” of American guitar building. We are working closely with Tom Bedell to save the very few instrument-grade spruce from these dying stands of wood, giving them another life in Bedell Guitars.”

- JOHN GRIFFIN, OLD STANDARD WOOD -

BACK & SIDE WOOD

EAST INDIAN ROSEWOOD

WOOD	East Indian rosewood has been the standard rosewood choice for decades. It is often associated with the great dreadnoughts, and is an amazingly neutral wood that takes its personality from the player, making it a natural choice for many styles.
BOTANICAL NAME	Dalbergia latifolia
ORIGIN	India, Indonesia, Nepal
TONAL QUALITIES	Well-balanced lows, mids, and highs. Famous for rich basses and clear treble response.
AESTHETICS	Black-streaked wood with coloration that usually leans toward purplish brown, and then oxidizes to a rich brown color. The grain is straight, sometimes wavy or interlocked.

East Indian Rosewood
Dalbergia Latifolia

Over a century ago, a rosewood seed sprouted in Karnataka, India, destined to become a part of your Coffee House guitar... but first it had a job to do. Shortly after the Titanic collided with a formidable iceberg and during the months preceding WWI when all of Europe was on edge, this little seedling took root and prepared to serve its first purpose: to provide protection and shelter. Throughout its life, this beautiful rosewood tree offered shade to the coffee plants that flourished near its roots. It matured more quickly than its wild relatives, thanks to the farming practices bestowed on the coffee plants, such as fertilizer, compost, and plentiful water.

The fertile and culturally rich Indian state of Karnataka produces over 50% of the nation's coffee, and India's shade-grown beans are legendary among coffee aficionados. In addition, shade-grown coffee plantations are far more sustainable than full-sun coffee plantations because no clear-cutting is required to make way for the crop. Shade-grown coffee plants exist in a natural ecosystem where the farmers work in harmony with the existing terrain, and plant and animal life.

Prior to its incarnation in your Bedell guitar, the tree that provided your tonewood benefited from the care given to its soil mates and in return, provided cool shade for the crop, shelter and habitat for an array of insects and dozens of species of birds, and contributed plentiful leaf mulch and cuttings to return nutrients back to the soil. This tree was harvested with the permission of Indian forestry officials when it could no longer contribute the requisite amount of shade to benefit the coffee crops it was serving. In most cases, whenever a rosewood tree is legally harvested in India, another seedling is planted nearby to ensure continual renewal of Indian forest resources.

Stringent governmental regulations dictate very specific guidelines for the harvest and sale of all Indian hardwoods. There is only one source for acquiring legal East Indian rosewood that grows in India: The auctions overseen by the government. All auctioned woods are subject to very strict regulation. It is illegal to cut any living East Indian rosewood tree in the wild. Rosewood trees may be harvested on private property, such as a coffee plantation, however a permit is required.

CONSERVATION OF INDIAN ROSEWOOD

HOW YOU CAN HELP

While the Indian government is proactively managing, conserving and reforesting the forests of India, East Indian rosewood is listed as a vulnerable species by the IUCN Red List, in part due to illegal logging activities. The World Bank estimates the annual global market loses $10 billion annually from illegal logging, and governments lose an additional $5 billion in revenues.

To learn more about the impacts of illegal logging, visit:

wwf.panda.org/about_our_earth/about_forests/deforestation/forest_illegal_logging/

To learn more about the status of Indian hardwood forests and East Indian rosewood, visit:

iucnredlist.org/details/full/32098/0

TAKE ACTION:

Do your due diligence. Only purchase East Indian rosewood products that have a clear chain of custody showing the wood was acquired through the proper governmental channels.

The tree must be at least 175 centimeters in diameter (nearly six feet), and the landowners are not allowed to harvest the tree themselves. Once a permit is acquired (if it is granted), a licensed third party harvests the tree, assigns it a unique number and transports it to the nearest government depot for auction. All legally harvested Indian hardwoods must follow these procedures. There are checkpoints throughout the country and if a driver is found transporting Indian hardwood without the proper permits, the wood and the driver's vehicle will be confiscated on the spot.

ABOUT OVERSEAS TRADERS

Overseas Traders is owned and operated by the Yogi family, and is located in the bustling town of Hubli, about 250 miles northwest of Bangalore, in the state of Karnataka. Overseas Traders was founded in 1968, though the Yogis have been in the lumber business for five generations. The company is FSC-certified, a member of NAMM and specializes in providing spectacular rosewood for the musical instrument industry. The wood buyers from Overseas Traders attend 60 to 70 government auctions a year to acquire the most promising trees. Every tree is numbered from the moment it is harvested, and it is tracked through the auction process. Once the trees are in Overseas Traders' possession, fastidious records are kept through transport, processing, storage and sale, ensuring flawless chain-of-custody documentation and assurance to Bedell devotees that their tonewood was acquired legally through the proper channels that benefit the citizens of the state in which the trees were selectively harvested or salvaged.

NECK WOOD

HONDURAN MAHOGANY

WOOD	Honduran mahogany is a medium-lightweight wood, ranging in color from light brown to dark, primarily used for necks because of the feel and the stability it provides.
BOTANICAL NAME	Swietenia macrophylla
ORIGIN	Mexico to southern Amazonia in Brazil
AESTHETICS	Ranging from light brown to reddish brown in color, with an open pore structure.

The Honduran mahogany used for the neck of Bedell Coffee House models was selectively harvested in Guatemala in 2011 and was imported into the U.S. by Bedell Guitars in the same year. It was then warehoused in Bedell's humidity and temperature-controlled warehouse in Central Oregon.

The Craftsmen

JAKE SPECE LEAD CRAFTSMAN

Before Jake was promoted to lead craftsman, he worked in the body department, and he still holds the shop record for the most bodies assembled by one person. Before he started building guitars, Jake worked as a short-order cook. His experience in the kitchen was the ideal training ground for the intensity of the production environment; he learned how to work hard and remain cool under pressure. As a guitar player, he has a deep appreciation for both the beauty and tonal properties of the exquisite tonewoods in the Bedell Wood Library.

A Central Oregon native, Jake is the son of a welder and a piano player and the grandson of a mandolin player – he has music and craftsmanship in his blood. Jake’s dad taught him to weld at the tender age of seven. When he was fourteen, Jake saved enough money moving pipe to buy a guitar from the local pawn shop; he learned five chords from a library book, and formed a band called The Kronk Men with two friends. They’ve been playing together since 1998. Jake can’t believe it’s been fifteen years. He said, “It’s like we’re the Rolling Stones of Central Oregon.” He plays with The Kronk Men around Bend regularly and is known for his unconventional playing style. When not building bodies for Bedell, or shredding on stage, Jake spends his time taking care of his family, skateboarding, and hanging out with his rad dog, Rudy.

JUSTIN FRANCIS NECKS

Justin Francis is a musician, a skilled woodworker, a retired professional snowboarder, and an avid fly fisherman. He has an eye for immaculate detail, and enjoys immersing himself in the minute detail and technical perfection required of all Bedell craftsman. On any given day, you'll find Justin in the workshop hand shaping, dovetailing, wood binding, hand finishing and meticulously executing every other detail that goes into completing Bedell guitar necks.

Born in Humboldt County, California, Justin's family moved to Bend when he was nine years old and Justin has lived in Oregon ever since. The Francis family is full of talented musicians, so Justin's passion for music and musical instruments is practically coded in his DNA. Justin grew up playing sax in the school band and he currently plays guitar (and drums, on occasion).

Justin's favorite wood in the Bedell Wood Library is Brazilian rosewood, because every single set is different from the last, and because, as he says, "The grain orientation is incredible, it's definitely not a boring wood, though Ziricote is a close second choice because it has crazy three-dimensional figure, the figure pops so much it doesn't even look like wood." Justin believes in Bedell's sustainability mission because he wants to ensure that these beautiful exotic woods are around for the next generation.

JASON CHINCHEN INLAY

Walk into the inlay room at the Bedell workshop and, invariably, you'll be greeted by a big, happy smile from Jason Chinchén. Jason is a man who loves his work, and for good reason. His talents and skill are perfectly suited for the demanding position of Bedell inlay artist.

Jason spends his days at Bedell immersed in art – conceptualizing, designing, and then cutting and fitting the tiniest pieces of precious materials into the fretboard, peghead, and soundboard of Bedell guitars. Jason is well versed in various artistic mediums, but inlay is where he truly shines. He has an innate feel for “painting” with the materials, for using flash to create shadow and light. Jason finds creative inspiration in both the past and the present – in the tried and true aesthetics found in classical art and Art Nouveaux, as well as beauty found in the organic, natural world.

As an avid outdoorsman, Jason is especially passionate about Bedell's reverence for the forests. He volunteers regularly for trail cleanups and firmly believes in stewardship – showing respect and being responsible for what we're using, and being aware of our footsteps to minimize our impact and find a way to have a responsible, respectful relationship with the outdoors and the special places we love. As Jason likes to say, “We're all in it together.”

DAN CARLTON STRING UP

Having the opportunity to play so many beautiful guitars is one of the most rewarding parts of working in string-up and final assembly, and since Dan's true passion is playing instruments, he's particularly suited for the task. He enjoys starting with the handcrafted body and neck of a guitar, and bringing all the pieces together to completion, to hear the instrument for the first time.

Dan grew up in Washington State in a very musical family. He started playing guitar in the 8th grade, to "stay out of trouble" (no word on whether or not it's kept him out of trouble in the long run). His grandmother is an accomplished ragtime and jazz pianist, and his father plays the accordion and the piano. Every night, when Dan and his three brothers were tucked into bed, and the house was finally quiet, their father would play the piano while the boys fell asleep. It left an indelible imprint on the four boys, and all of them are musicians to this day.

Dan moved to Bend in 2002, and worked in construction prior to joining the Bedell team. A vocalist who plays ukulele, mandolin, guitar, banjo and violin, Dan also plays drums and piano, but says he's not very good at either. He says stringed instruments are his favorite, because, "You can move the tone around and sing at the same time." In his spare time, Dan enjoys playing just about any musical instrument, spending time outdoors, cooking with his wife, sword fighting with his kids, and homebrewing his signature chocolate stout.

DAVID PETO STRING UP

Growing up in Central Oregon, David never had a babysitter. His grandfather, father, and step-dad were all tradesmen, and as a child, the men in his family kept an eye on him – and often put him to work. At the age of fourteen, David taught himself to play guitar. He built his first guitar in high school woodshop and he's been building and playing ever since. In 2006 he moved to the Oregon coast, where he worked for K&K Sound and then headed to California to attend the Musician's Institute in Los Angeles, California. At M.I. Dave earned his A.A. degree with an emphasis in guitar building.

At Bedell Guitars, prior to finish, David works with the neck and the body, to fit the dovetail joints. After the finish has been applied, he attaches the necks, bridges, hardware and strings to complete the instruments. Dave admits to having a healthy amount of O.C.D., but says the key is knowing when to stop. He particularly loves working with woods from the Pacific Northwest, and has a soft spot for the Bedell Earthsong series guitars. He's a self-taught craftsman, and has read every book on the subject. In his spare time, when he's not building guitars, he works on his house, goes fishing, and takes road trips.

SIMON HAYCRAFT FINISH

Simon is a sculptor and a painter with a deep appreciation for tonewoods, and a comprehensive understanding of finishes. He has almost a sixth-sense for the perfect finish, which is essential since he hand finishes all Bedell instruments. Simon sees each instrument as a piece of art, as a canvas that he has the honor to complete. Like many artists, beauty is something Simon strives for, no matter what he does.

Simon grew up in England, studied art in college, and has a diploma in design from Leamington Spar College. He moved to the U.S. in 2000, and has lived in Oregon since 2005. Prior to joining Bedell Guitars, Simon ran his own custom interior finishes company for high-end residential homes. In his spare time, Simon can be found fishing, carving, or working on other creative projects in his home studio.

ANGELA CHRISTENSEN BRAND MANAGER

Angela has always been talented at working with her hands, she has a degree in sculpture and has been working with wood -- jewelry, high-end cabinetry and musical instruments -- for most of her adult life. In 1999, while studying at ASU, a summer road trip launched her passion for wood when she stopped at the Wolf Education and Research Center in Idaho, and was awed by the impressive hand-carved doors that graced the information center. Struck by the beauty of this functional artwork, in that moment, she knew wood was her medium of choice. When she returned from her trip, she started working for a custom furniture shop, and never looked back.

Angela moved to Bend, Oregon, and has been working in the musical instrument industry since 2002. She started managing raw wood and parts and then moved into purchasing wood and working with suppliers. She apprenticed under a master luthier in inlay in 2006, and at the same time, learned string up and assembly. Currently, Angela oversees the Bedell brand, the Seed-to-Song Studio, the inlay department, and manages all wood purchasing for custom instruments. She says the most satisfying part of her job is working directly with clients, helping to design the ultimate custom instrument. In her spare time, she's focused on her family. "It's all about family," she says. She and her husband also have a jewelry line called Snap Dragon Studios.

Consent on International Trade of Endangered Species (CITES) documentation must be obtained prior to importing, exporting or re-exporting Threatened or Endangered Species.

This APHIS-issued import permit only covers compliance with APHIS regulations and requirements. Therefore, this APHIS permit for the commodity to be imported does not reduce or eliminate the permittee's legal duty and responsibility to likewise comply with all other Federal and State regulatory requirements applicable to the commodity to be imported.

1. If you are importing CITES/ESA regulated live plant material for planting, you may also need to complete a PPQ Form 587 to import plants or plant products. Please see the following site for a list of plants and plant parts intended for planting that require a permit:
